
Chillies were very popular in South America but no one else in the world knew of this spicy fruit.
One day a sailor named Christopher Columbus sailed to South America.
This sailor was actually looking for India. He wanted to buy black pepper. Instead, he found South America and the chilli!

How sad for Columbus.
It was a little sad, but, because he went to South America, he found the chilli. It was as spicy as the black pepper. And so, Christopher Columbus packed the chilli and took it back to his country with him!

But how did it come here?
Chilli was one of the things that the Portuguese brought to India.
Do you know
