

Cinnamon

Indians have been using cinnamon for a long, long time. The Chinese wrote about it in 2700 BC(BCE). Cinnamon not only adds great flavour to food, but also helps to preserve it.

People from other parts of the world appreciated the fragrance and taste of cinnamon. They wanted it too, and were willing to pay a good price for it. The Greeks, Romans and Egyptians bought cinnamon from India. In the Middle Ages, the Venetians grew rich by levying tax on the cinnamon that was brought from India to Europe and the Mediterranean.
