- The healthiest sources of carbohydrates—unprocessed or minimally processed whole grains, vegetables, fruits and beans—promote good health by providing vitamins, minerals, fiber, and a host of important phytonutrients.

- Unhealthier sources of carbohydrates include white bread, pastries, sodas, and other highly processed or refined foods. These items contain easily digested carbohydrates that may contribute to weight gain, interfere with weight loss and promote diabetes and heart disease.

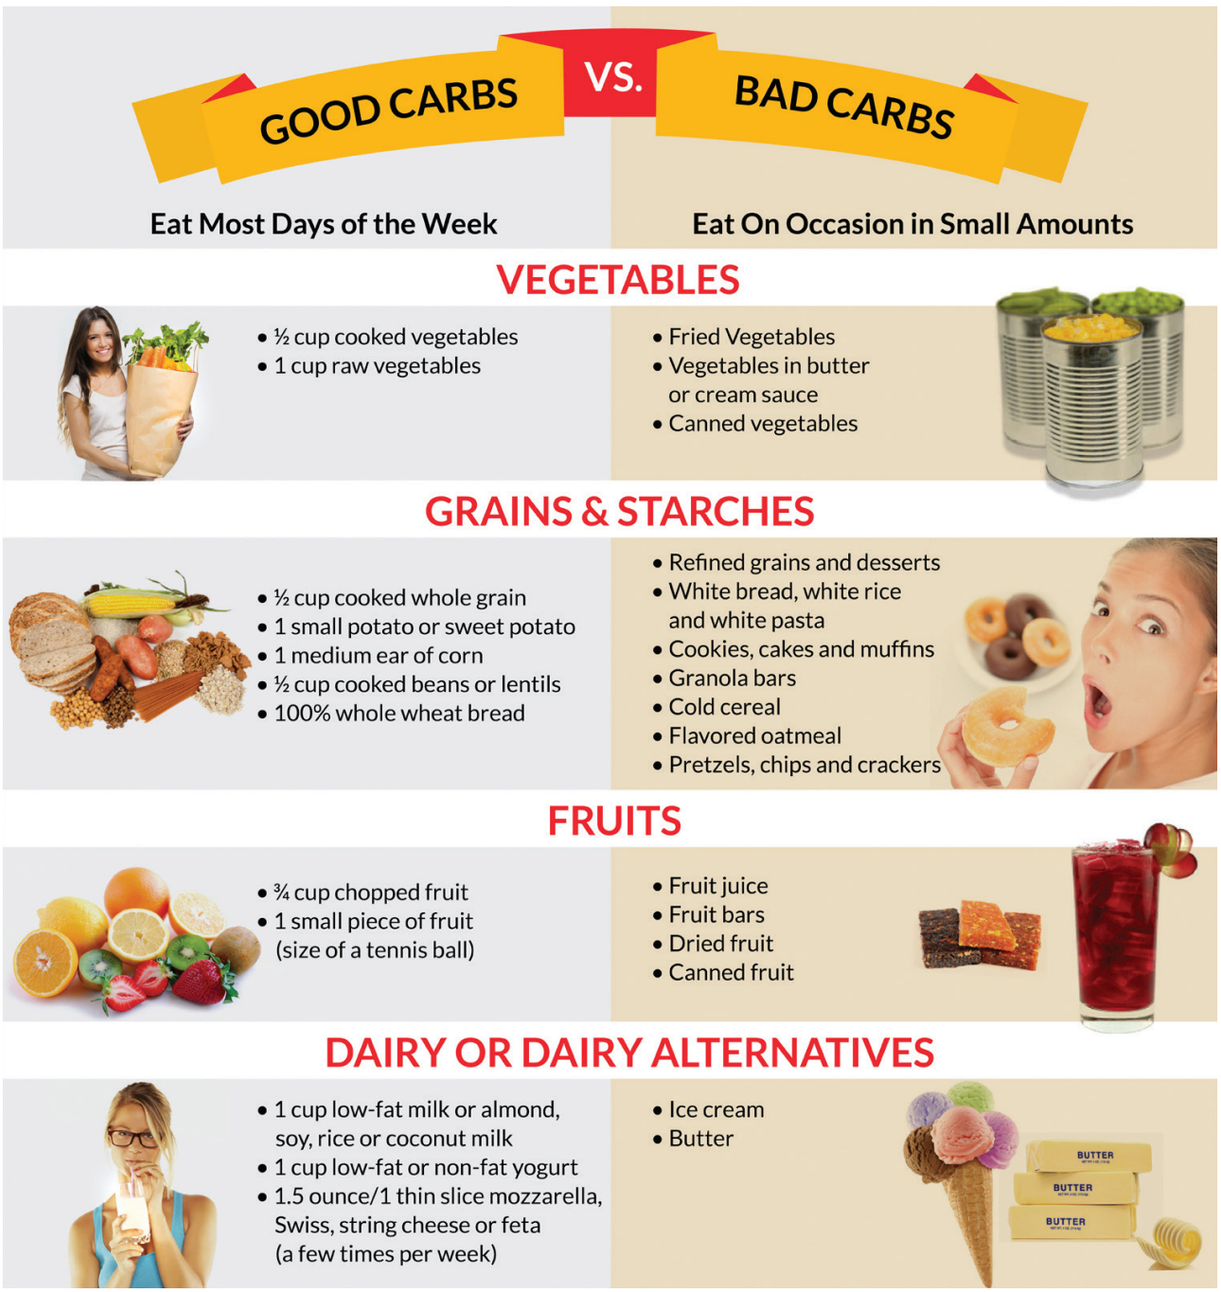

Fig 9.3: Good Carbs Vs Bad Carbs

UNIT_09_132-148.indd 140 13-02-2020 19:26:36