Arctic tundra extends southwards from North Pole to the Taiga forest. Tundra is also found in the high altitudes especially in the Alpine region.

Due to long and severe cold winters, this region is treeless and has very little vegetation. The growing season for plants is very short. Natural vegetation mainly consists of shrubs, sedges, grasses, mosses and lichens.

Polar Bear

Bearberry

Arctic Fox

Lichen

Caribou

Cotton Grass

Musk Ox

TN_Govt_Geography_XI_Std Unit_07.indd 198 2/3/2020 4:34:22 PM