Introduction

A country's social, economic and political strength lies in the distribution, utilization and conservation of its resources. Anything which can be used for satisfying the human needs is called resource. Natural resources are resources that exist without action of humankind. Natural resources are obtained from environment. Many natural resources are essential for human survival. Resources always cannot be consumed in their original form, but they must be processed into usable commodities and usable things.

Importance of resource

- Natural resources satisfy daily needs of man such as food, clothing and shelter.
- Natural resources also contribute immensely to boost up a nation's economy.
