8.9.3. (PABX) Private Automatic Branch Exchange:

A Private automatic branch exchange (PABX) is an automatic telephone switching system within a private enterprise. Originally, such systems called Private Branch Exchanges (PBX) required the use of a live operator. Since almost all private branch exchanges today are automatic, the abbreviation "PBX" usually implies a "PABX".

Benefits of PABX Systems:

PABX systems also known as E PABX or PBX, are widely used nowadays in offices, hotels, various industries where there is requirement of intra-office communication between departments or otherwise, PABX is a must. All modern offices are using PABX.

There are many benefits for having a PABX in an office. The nature of benefits may vary from one industry to another. Lists of some benefits which may be applicable across any industries:

1. Sharing of Resources:

One of the major benefits of having PABX is sharing of telecom resources. Usually, any office which has few PSTN (Public Switched Telephone Network) lines needs to be shared among many people in the office. PABX systems help sharing those limited number of PSTN connections PABC has PSTN Connectivity at one end, and many extension lines at the other end, which are given to many persons, various rooms, and tables.

When outsiders can call up those PSTN numbers and reach many extensions directly or by the help of an operator. Employees can also make outgoing calls from his chain directly by accessing PSTN line from his extension or through an operator.

2. Internal Office Calls and Call Transferring:

PBX enables the employees to communicate with each other within the organizations. Previously, officials used a bell and used to kick around an office peon to call someone. Now with the invention of PABX the employers or employees can call others working in the organisation through intercom whenever needed.
