b. Writing a speech

Have you heard the speeches of Rabindranath Tagore or Swami Vivekananda. Their speeches have been published for their good content, values and effective style. Writing a speech before you speak on a stage is as essential as presenting it.

- How can speeches make an impact on the listener?
- Why do we write speeches before we orate?

You may find that you are expected to speak in your school assembly, in a competition, school function or at a public gathering or social event, and being prepared to speak at these occasions requires planning and preparing the text beforehand. Here is a guideline.

Secrets of writing a speech that wins a crowd:

Guidelines

- Open with a statement that will grasp the attention of the audience. Choose your topic well.
- Focus on a message, which needs to match the occasion.
- Find the purpose; why are you giving a speech on this topic? Pick your main ideas.
- Do not try to put too many ideas into your speech. Just give one or two main ideas.
- Persuade people by quoting someone else that the audience likes and respects.
- Write as you talk. Remember that you are writing a speech not an essay.
- Use short sentences. Don't use pretentious words. Use simple or concrete words.
- Concrete details keep people interested. Get your facts together.
- You want people to believe that you know what you are talking about. Use the library or Internet to collect information.
- All good speeches require shape - an Introduction, the body and a conclusion.
- Simplify after you have written a first draft of your speech, go back and look for words you can edit or replace. Editing words can make your points clearer.
