g. The Past Perfect Tense

Indran had always wanted to bring out a magazine and be its editor! He had got what he wanted. In his tenure as the editor of an established magazine, he had published many notable pieces of writing. All the well-known poets of today had considered it an honour to have their first poems published by him. Recently, he reminisced about the first magazine of which he was the editor, owner and distributor.

The first copy had been a handwritten magazine that was carbon-copied by him. He had sold it to his grandfather's friends for 50 paise. The money that he had collected went towards the next issue. By the time he left school, he had launched his pet project.

The past tense and the past perfect tense are used to talk about the things in the past. However, use the past perfect tense to talk about something that happened before another action in the past, which is usually in the past tense.

Task: Using the hints given below, complete the paragraph using the Past Perfect tense, wherever necessary to relate the incident to the police. The first line has been given to you.

Hints: Two men on a bike had snatched the chain from a young lady as she was walking on the Adyar bridge at 5.00 p.m. Sunitha too happened to be there jogging at that time.

I had jogged on the Adyar Bridge for ten minutes when I saw_____

h. The Past Perfect Continuous Tense

Two brothers were separated from their family during floods. Each one had been dreaming of finding the other for five years. Though they had been living in the same city, they hadn't met each other even once. Both were in the same field, one had been manufacturing furniture all these years while the other had been marketing the same in another city.

The past perfect continuous tense indicates a continuous action that was completed at some point in the past.
