PREFACE

XI – COMMUNICATIVE ENGLISH

A textbook of English should equip the learners with adequate ability to use the language accurately and kindle their interest in reading. Expertise in all the four skills, namely Listening, Speaking, Reading and Writing, is a pre-requisite to acquire fluency and gain confidence in using the language. Besides enabling acquisition of skills, humane values have to be inculcated in students through the text. Students should be able to link their experience with various situations and contexts that occur in everyday life. Hence, it is essential for the children of this century to learn English with the focus on the acquisition of communicative skills.

Based on the themes listed out in the National Curriculum Framework, 2005, the texts have been chosen with great care and diligence, aiming at promoting the values of kindness, humane feelings, affection, loyalty, appreciation and concern for Nature, handling problems with ease in an optimistic manner and portraying other such essential virtues.
